But then my mother was diagnosed with dementia.

And everything changed.

Suddenly, I was responsible for her care. I had to make decisions about her health, her finances, and her living situation. I had to be there for her, every day, through the good times and the bad.

It was a daunting task, and I didn't know how I was going to do it.

But I did it.

With the help of my husband, my children, and our friends and family, I learned how to care for my mother. I learned how to be patient, how to be compassionate, and how to love unconditionally.

And I discovered the incredible power of love.

Love is what got me through the tough times. Love is what gave me the strength to keep going when I wanted to give up. Love is what made it all worthwhile.

My mother passed away a few years ago. But her memory lives on in my heart. And I am forever grateful for the experience of caring for her. It taught me the true meaning of love, and it changed my life forever.

In Crash, I share my story of becoming a reluctant caregiver. I write about the challenges and rewards of caregiving, and I offer advice to other caregivers who are struggling to cope.

I hope that my story will inspire you to find the strength and resilience to care for your loved ones. I hope that it will help you to discover the incredible power of love.
