Growing Up Multiracial in a World of Labels

Coming-of-age in a society that often pigeonholes individuals into specific categories, Fragoso navigates the challenges of being multiracial. She grapples with questions of identity, longing to feel a sense of belonging in both the white and Filipino worlds that form her heritage. Her experiences illuminate the subtle and overt biases that people of color face, sparking a profound examination of the pervasive societal constructs that shape our perceptions of race.

Finding Strength in the Search for Truth

Fragoso's journey is not without its struggles. She encounters moments of doubt, confusion, and pain as she questions her place in the world. Yet, through her unwavering resilience and a relentless pursuit of truth, she gradually discovers the power of embracing her own unique blend of cultures. With each step forward, she inspires readers to reflect on their own identities and the importance of celebrating what makes them different.

A Universal Story of Family and Connection

Beyond its exploration of race and identity, "Tiger, Tiger" is also a poignant exploration of family and the power of human connection. Fragoso paints a vivid portrait of her unconventional upbringing, marked by both love and loss. Her relationships with her parents, siblings, and extended family form the backdrop against which she weaves her own narrative, revealing the enduring bonds that sustain her on her journey.

A Must-Read for Seekers of Identity and Belonging

"Tiger, Tiger" is a must-read for anyone seeking a deeper understanding of identity, family, and the human experience. Through Margaux Fragoso's honest and compelling storytelling, readers will embark on a profound journey of self-discovery, learning to embrace the complexities that make them who they are.
